In order to be in the mood to go flying around in the air on carpets and do all the things that made Bagdad bad one must smoke a wicked pipe and take a drink too many. Now with Farmer Al he merely watched his cat Ebenezer smoking a pipe that made him happy and right away Al wants to try it too.

During the course of his fast and furious ride Al saw many dazzling things. Perhaps many too many. After a series of thrills in elaborate cities, on sliding stairways and watching Egyptian dances Al wakes up right in the midst of his barnyard and finds himself making love to Nanett, the pet goat. Nan doesn't like the idea one bit and chases Al right out of the yard.

Now Al is convinced that "It Is Not Always Safe To Imitate A Bad Example"
